Permit Programs Are More Than a Parking Problem

From parking to licensing, every municipality manages some version of the same challenge – overseeing the day to day operations of the community, while protecting the safety and health of residents. Those that manage municipal operations – parking directors, code enforcement officers, city clerks, public works supervisors – don’t need a vendor. They need a program and partner that works.

Four Things That Break Municipal Permit Programs

1. Officers and inspectors can’t tell at a glance if a permit is valid.

What helps: High-visibility permits with consistent placement and fast authenticity cues – so enforcement is a two-second check, not a conversation.

2. Temporary and visitor access creates constant exceptions.

What helps: Temporary permits with controlled validity windows and a clear visual difference from annual permits – no guessing in the field

3. Permits get copied, shared, or transferred.

What helps: Security features that are hard to duplicate and quick to validate – without slowing down the officers using them.

4. Distribution pulls staff away from everything else.

What helps: A direct-to-user fulfillment model that ships permits to the permit holder – no pickup lines, no manual sorting, no staffing surge.

Why Rydin?

Rydin has been making permits for government and municipal programs for decades. We know that code enforcement officers and parking directors have different priorities – and that the permit program has to work for both.

What we do: physical permit and identification solutions that reduce ambiguity, support enforcement decisions, and simplify program management. We don’t ask you to replace systems that already work.

We make the permits that plug into them.

- Supports dozens of permit types across every municipal vertical
- Security matched to your program’s risk level
- Permit Distribution Services to eliminate in-office fulfillment headaches
- U.S.-based manufacturing and dedicated municipal support from permitting experts

“The more consistent the permit system, the fewer disputes, appeals, and escalations downstream.”

RXL Hang Tags

Hang Tags Built for Today's Vehicle Technology.

Visibility Built for Modern Vehicles

A hang tag that doesn't stay in place defeats the purpose. Modern vehicles have cameras, sensors, and mirror assemblies that can make a standard hook size an issue for residents trying to install the permit correctly and for officers trying to validate it in the field. When a tag can't hang properly, it ends up on the dashboard. That reduces visibility, creates enforcement ambiguity, and leads to citations that could have been avoided.

Rydin's RXL (Extra Large Hook) Hang Tags were designed specifically for today's vehicle interiors. A 3.6x larger hook fits around any mirror assembly and keeps the permit visible exactly where it needs to be – every time.

- Extra-large hook fits modern mirror assemblies
- High visibility at a distance – readable from the aisle
- Durable composite material, built for year-round outdoor use
- Transferable when policy allows

3.6x Bigger Hook, Perfect for New Model Mirrors!

Operational Impact

- Faster field verification
- Fewer improper display citations
- Fewer disputes at the window
